PARK WEST GALLERY CLICK IT CAMPAIGN

Land Auctions seem to present more safeguards than any cruise art company with information to review ahead of auction and research. Not possible at sea. No Internet Access easily available. No regulations. No advance catalog or terms. I would not say that any cruise auction house really protects buyers from anything.

Christe's and Sotheby's seem to follow standards set forth in NY and other states. Because on international waters, cruise auctions have no rules to follow. So if you are interested in buying art and getting value, according to many on Cruise Critic Community who've attended auctions and Fine Arts Registry that is an art resource, the best thing to do is buy a) on a cruise just for fun of the experience, knowing going into auction you will over pay on a cruise and buy because you like the art - not for value or b) if you want serious art investments, wait, research, and go to the top two auction houses that are regulated.

EXCEPTIONAL STANDARDS

Park West Gallery offers the finest artwork and the highest standards of professionalism in the art world today. If there is one thing that I know about Park West Gallery, it is that you can be sure that what you are collecting is authentic and will be held to the highest levels of examination and assessment. When you visit a cruise ship on vacation and Park West is there offering their services, be sure to take advantage of them. Your art auctioneer and art staff is always there to help you collect what you are looking for. When you leave, you will know that you have collected the prized artwork that you can now treasure and pass down to your family throughout time.

SUPER ART AMBASSADORS

During recent cruise we purchased art from a Park West Gallery art auction. From the first moment of the auction it was obvious that the auctioneers were passionate about art, their organization, and about our interest. We bought several works and couldn't be more satisfied with the whole process. Park West Gallery's outstanding reputation and customer service has made me a fan for life!

AT EASE WHEN PUCHASING ART

Thank you to Park West Gallery for introducing me into the world of art! I have never attended an auction or new anything about art at all until recently on one of my cruises when the Auctioneer and his assistants were so friendly, gave me information and made me feel at ease with my purchase. I will definitely continue to collect my art from Park West Gallery - after all they are on most of the cruiseships sailing the seven seas!
